ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

We should like to thank all those who have helped to make this volume possible. Miss Elizabeth Ralph initiated the project when she was Bristol City Archivist. Her successor Miss E.M. Williams, the present City Archivist Mr J.S. Williams, the staff of the Bristol Record Office and Professor McGrath have given us continual help and encouragement.

Without the practical assistance of Reginald and Philomena Jackson it would have been difficult to complete the work. Mr Richard Bryant of Alan Sutton Publishing Ltd. has given very helpful practical advice, and Mr Edwin Turnbull has assisted with the presentation of the map. We are grateful to Mr. J.S. Williams for permission to reproduce the inventory of Thomas A Deane.

Finally, our thanks are due to the Bristol Record Society, the Bristol and Gloucestershire Archaeological Society, the Bristol and West Building Society and the Marc Fitch Fund for grants which have enabled this work to be published.

FOREWORD

The importance of the inventories of probate records as sources of information about our ancestors cannot be overstressed. The genealogists have long realized this, now the social and economic historians are awakening to the possibilities of a new field of research. For the social historian, home life at all levels of the scale is reflected in them. Bristol being an important centre of trade and commerce, the inventories are a valuable source of information on trade and industry.

This index of probate inventories covering the period 1542–1804 is the result of the detailed examination of over seven thousand inventories. It is an index of names, places, trades and occupations. For the researcher in this field it is an essential piece of equipment. In addition Mr and Mrs George have prepared abstracts of all the documents indexed and transcribed some 300 inventories especially relevant to the City trades. They are still continuing this work and many of the abstracts and transcriptions remain in manuscript. These show the extent of the task undertaken and demonstrate the difficulty of printing them in full. They intend, eventually, to deposit these abstracts in the Bristol Record Office, from which in the meanwhile details can be obtained about this aspect of their work.

Edwin and Stella George should be congratulated on the good workmanlike treatment of the available information.

PREFACE

The object of the guide is to record the probate inventories of the City and Deanery of Bristol which are held in the Bristol Record Office, thus showing what is available and making the contents more readily accessible for study. Details of the main series of testamentary records to which these inventories belong are to be found in the Bristol Diocesan Catalogue of the Records of the Bishop and Archdeacons and of the Dean and Chapter.<sup>1</sup>

Our interest in the inventories began in 1966 when at a University Extra-Mural Class Miss Ralph suggested that the inventories of Temple Parish could be profitably examined to see what information they could add to the history of the parish. Thirteen inventories were studied, and a paper was produced at the end of the session.<sup>2</sup>

The bundles of wills and inventories which had been stored in the Bristol Probate Registry came to the Bristol Record Office in 1958. Many of the wills had their corresponding inventories folded inside them. By 1966 most of these inventories had been separated from the wills and added to the main inventory collection. We were then asked if we would prepare an index to these inventories; and we decided to make abstracts of them at the same time. We were able to include some 200 inventories which were still remaining either with the wills, the administrations or which were included in the collection of cause papers.<sup>3</sup> All letters, accounts and documents included in the bundles of inventories have been recorded in this guide. We have also made detailed abstracts of their contents, and have fully transcribed over 300 city inventories selected as being representative of the major trades of the city. Work is still continuing on improving the abstracts and extending the transcriptions. Up-to-date information on the progress may be obtained from the Bristol Record Office.

INTRODUCTION

Probate

The last will and testament of a dying man was a serious spiritual matter as the preamble to sixteenth century wills makes abundantly clear. Consequently, ensuring that his wishes were faithfully carried out without fraud became the responsibility of the ecclesiastical rather than the secular courts. The first step was proving the will: establishing that the will produced to the court was in fact the last will of the deceased person, that it was valid and that the executors presenting it were justified in acting on behalf of the deceased.

Ecclesiastical courts were set up by the bishops to control the affairs of each diocese. These courts retained their probate jurisdiction until 1857, but could only act within their own diocese. If the deceased had property or goods outside its domain, the diocesan court was powerless to call witnesses or investigate any irregularities. The will had then to be proved in the Archbishop's Court, the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, which had jurisdiction over the whole province. Such probate was all that was needed, but nevertheless copies of wills and inventories produced before it were often deposited with the Diocesan Registry and appear with the local documents. Sometimes wills that could have been proved satisfactorily in the diocesan registry appear to have been taken to the prerogative court as if to give them added authority, but it is more likely to have been a precautionary measure. Bonds due to the deceased were part of his goods and chattels, and if a bond-holder lived or moved outside the diocese difficulties could arise. The following extract taken from the inventory of Elizabeth Moore illustrates the problem:

"John Hall of Compton, one of the overseers of the will of John Moore has in his possession, having no authority to keep and moving out of the Diocese, the sum of £10 which he refuseth to deliver or take out any administration for during the minority of Elizabeth Moore and which is part of her father's legacy."<sup>1</sup>

An executor had to assume responsibility for the goods, credits and debts of the deceased and distribute them according to the provisions of the will. The presumption in law was that the deceased's affairs were in good order and that all legacies, debts and expenses could be met out of the estate; but if a proper inventory of the deceased's goods and credits had been accepted by the probate court its declared value became the limit of his liability. At first the court insisted that a 'true and perfect inventory' should be submitted to it before giving the executor permission to act, but with the passage of time the court relaxed this requirement and would grant probate provided that it was satisfied that an inventory could be produced if demanded. The cause papers contain many citations to produce such inventories. Sixty inventories, most of them very detailed, have been included from that source, the earliest being dated 1684.

In 1704 a different type of inventory begins to appear. These are for mariners who died during their service at sea, often on H.M. ships of war. These documents served to safeguard their dependents and are limited to a statement of the wages due for the deceased's last voyage, the name of the ship and sometimes that of the master or captain. In some cases at least, the information was provided by the Navy Office.

Ecclesiastical law laid down the provisions to be followed in making inventories and gave guidance about the items to be included. It is sufficient to say here that the object of probate was to safeguard the creditors, legatees and dependents, and that a proper inventory was in the interest of the administrator.

A minimum of two appraisers was required, one of whom was to be a creditor if possible, while one of the others should be sufficiently knowledgeable to evaluate the goods adequately. If specialised goods were involved, a fellow craftsman or tradesman was usually called in to assist.

Internal evidence suggests that instructions were available for the guidance of appraisers. There is considerable similarity in the layout of inventories at any given time. The earlier ones almost invariably start with 'Wearing apparel' and 'Money in Purse' as if those two items headed the list. Later the wearing apparel may occur in one of the rooms and the money near the end together with the debts. There were standard prices for livestock; and for crock metal, brass, pewter and iron, which were taken by weight. After 1634 the use of the words 'trumpery' and 'and other small things', which had been common up to then, changed in favour of the expression 'and other implements'. The change, although not absolute, is sufficiently well marked to suggest a change in the guidance given to the appraisers was made about that time.

The goods to be included in the inventories were the deceased's personal possessions, his moveable goods, trade goods, tools of trade, farm stock, cultivated crops and any chattel leases, but not freehold property or those fixtures belonging to the house or farm which the heir or incoming occupier would expect to find. Wainscot and window leaves, which we now regard as fixtures, were usually included, but large cider presses were not.

It was realized that the executor might sometimes have to sell some or all of the goods in his charge to pay debts and to settle the legacies for which he was responsible. The appraisers were expected to bear this in mind and to value the goods accordingly "at such price as they may be sold for at the time". This accounts for such descriptive statements as those from the following inventories:

"an old blind horse hurt with a pike and like to die"<sup>2</sup>

"a gray mare with one eye; a bay mare with a bald face"<sup>3</sup>

"bedding, some being rotten and worn out during his sickness"<sup>4</sup>

"12 yards of motheaten kersie",<sup>5</sup>

"8 very aged stools; 5 old torn flock beds & bedding; worm eaten chest"<sup>6</sup>

With the inventories of the less wealthy inhabitants the appraisers may have tended to put low values on the goods in order to reduce the probate administration fees which were based on the value of the inventory. For those below £5 the fee was 1/- divided equally between the scribe and the commissioners; from £5 to £40 the scribe received 1/- and the commissioners 2/6; and for values over £40 the fee was 5/- of which the scribe received half. Not until 1758 were reduced fees introduced for 'widows and others acting on behalf of inferior officers and men dying in H.M. navy'. The fee then became 1/- for inventories below £5, 2/- between £5 and £40, and 3/- for those over £40 in total value.

In Bristol Observed Dr J.H. Bettey gives the population of the City of Bristol as not above 12,000 during the sixteenth century; about 15,000 on the eve of the Civil War (1642); 20,000 by 1700, rising to some 68,000 by the end of the century.<sup>7</sup> Over the three years 1641-1643 there is an average of 45 city inventories a year or about three per thousand of the population. By 1700 the average had fallen to 20 a year representing one per thousand of the population. The series of year-bundles ceases in 1764 after which only occasional inventories remain. These originate either from the probate administrations, the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes or through being permanently attached to their wills.

bundle of inventories in which that particular one is stored, together with its position in that bundle. The second gives the name of the person to whom it refers, and the third the parish or area from which it came. The fourth gives the deceased's occupation or status; the fifth the value of the goods in the inventory, and the final column contains any necessary notes. The occupation and status given in the fourth column is the subject of a separate index; while the distribution of inventories year by year and the occurrence of a large and distinctive class of mariners' inventories in the eighteenth century are shown in the appendices.

Column 1. Date of inventory bundle and other references

The probate inventory documents (for they are not all inventories) are stored in the year-bundles in which they were received by the Bristol Record Office, regardless of whether it was the year of appraisal, the year of exhibition, or the year in which they were received at the probate registry.

The inventories, which are folded and numbered on the outside, often have more than one set of numbers. In the earlier bundles they were already grouped alphabetically according to the first letter of the deceased's name and numbered in ink; but by 1697 this arrangement was not always observed. Consequently, starting with the year 1700, each bundle has been re-arranged by us in strict alphabetical order and the documents re-numbered in pencil to correspond. These are the numbers which, with the date of the year-bundle, form the specific reference to every document and which are given in the first column of this Guide. Thus 1692/4 indicates that the inventory is the fourth document in the bundle for 1692. The original numbering showed that there had been a loss of less than eight inventories per thousand between 1667 and 1720, that one was missing from the 1722 bundle and five from 1760.

Executor's accounts occur regularly among the documents. They may consist of just a few lines added at the end of an inventory, or they may be on separate sheets and very detailed. For the years between 1677 and 1680 there are groups of accounts at the end of each bundle, and these are noticeably in a worse state of preservation than the inventories themselves. Accounts were not always completed until several years after the inventory was made, and then being in a different year, they remained unrelated until brought together in this Guide.

Occasionally inventories were written at the foot of a will,<sup>7</sup> or were fastened to it with a seal. These, of necessity, remain with the wills, but they have been numbered into their place in the alphabetical sequence, although physically missing from the year-bundles. Should a gap in the numbering be noticed when looking through the actual inventories, reference to the separate year-lists<sup>8</sup> and then to this Guide will show if this is the explanation. Some inventories were required for proceedings in the consistory court and they also remain with those records. They are identified in the Guide by the letters 'CP' showing that they are with the 'Cause Papers'.<sup>9</sup> They may occur in those records several years after the date of the inventory.

When probate inventories have been found with the wills or administrations and have been introduced by us into the existing sequence, the number on the document preceeding the insertion has been given the suffix 'A' and the inserted one 'B'. Second copies of an inventory, or multiple documents relating to the same person (for example Ann Leaper's eleven documents)<sup>10</sup> have been given lower case letters after their sequence number. Between the years 1748 and 1758 there are several examples of inventories being written on the back of discarded documents, and in one case on the back of an earlier inventory.<sup>11</sup> These earlier documents cover a variety of subjects: a coal-works at Bitton,<sup>12</sup> a storm at sea,<sup>13</sup> the slave trade,<sup>14</sup> two excommunications<sup>15</sup> and a marriage allegation.<sup>16</sup>

We have made lists of all the Bristol wills covering the period of the inventories, recording both parish and occupation. When the name, date, parish and occupation given on a will were found to agree with an inventory the entry in the Guide is prefixed 'W', and the date of the will given if it is more than a year earlier than that of the inventory. If there is some difference between the information on an inventory and a will that might be relevant to it the prefix '(w)' has been used. The parish may not be the same, the occupation may be described differently or it may be a husband's will followed by his widow's inventory. Examination of the will may nevertheless be of interest.

When an inventory is found in a year-bundle which is much later than its appraisal date there is usually some special reason. It may be the coming of age of a minor, the sale of a lease, or a delay in the receipt of rent or of debts due to the estate. Occasionally it appears that another death in the family drew attention to the need for an inventory not previously provided. This tendency is more noticeable in the rural areas. A specific example is provided by the inventories of Thomas Adlam senior and Thomas Adlam junior which are in the same year-bundle although the father died two years before his son.<sup>17</sup>

Column 2. Names

The name of a person to whom the inventory refers may well appear on it three times, written by three different people and with a different spelling each time.

Inventories usually open with the words: “A true and perfect inventory of all the goods and chattels of John Smith of the parish of St. Stephen . . .” followed by his occupation. This statement contains the appraiser’s spelling of the name, and unless it is illiterate or phonetic it is the one given preference in this Guide. The name may also appear in the exhibition statement if the copy has been presented for probate; and there is a latinised form of the name, written in a professional hand, as a heading, on the outside of the folded document. This is not always free from error: Edward Hynam appears in the 1669 year-bundle between Clary and Cox because his occupation, cooper, was taken as his surname;<sup>18</sup> and John Clement who lived in Shirehampton and was buried at Westbury-on-Trym, is credited with belonging to Henbury parish.<sup>19</sup> Nevertheless, these latin headings are valuable as they sometimes confirm the parish, or help to clarify an ambiguity such as whether an inventory of (say) “Widow Hollister’s goods” arises from her own death or that of her late husband.

Giving preference to the spelling used by the appraiser results in a variety of closely similar spellings being indexed for the same generic name. There has been no attempt to group or classify them, or to include every minor variation. Each document has been indexed under the most reasonable spelling of the person’s name that occurs on it. Alternative spellings have only been given a separate entry when needed for clarification. The exhibition notice often contains information about the family or next of kin, but after 1676, the year in which fresh legislation was introduced,<sup>20</sup> it is more likely to be a simple endorsement of the fee paid.

The spelling of a name on a will may differ significantly from that on the corresponding inventory; for example Duplant/Deplant and Jennings/Genning. Consequently, when looking for a specific name it is necessary to check all possible spellings. The curious name ‘Wethon Wewol’ has been interpreted as Welthian Vowel (reading the ‘V’ as doubled to form a capital letter and with the vowels accidentally transposed). Katherine Frances Neck (1723/20) is one of the few people with more than one christian name.

After 1704 numerous mariners’ inventories appear, and introduce many foreign and unfamiliar names: Oman, Peuryfy, Syfere, Touffi, Thair, Thydall, Varah and many others who joined their ships in Bristol, registered their wills here, and never returned.

The social conditions of the time often made it expedient for a widow to marry again within a short period of her husband's death, perhaps before the administration of his estate was complete. Thus we have the inventory of Robert Marlowe dated December 1634, and a grant of administration to Elizabeth Mason, alias Marlowe, wife of John Mason and relict of Robert Marlowe, dated March 1634.<sup>21</sup> This resulted in a woman being known by more than one name; and to clarify her identity her previous name was kept as an alias. An alias may also arise from the wife's maiden name or originate from her husband's occupation. Such aliases served to maintain the legal identity of the individual, and were important when legacies or property were involved. Sons and daughters would be known by either name according to the circumstances, and their aliases might continue for many years. The various entries for John, Joyce and Richard Adams and for Marie Tilladams between 1618 and 1667 demonstrate this. With aliases, both names have been recorded and cross-referenced in the Guide.

In the same way that an alias recorded on an inventory helped to preserve a person's identity, so inventories were occasionally used as a means of recording an interest in certain property. William Redman's inventory<sup>22</sup> regarding the annual value of an old inn called the 'Worlds End' at Lawford's Gate may have been made with this in mind.

Column 3. Parishes and areas

The area from which these inventories are drawn contains almost an equal number of city and rural parishes. The inventories give the city parishes according to their dedication and the rural ones according to their locality.

The term 'parish' is used here in the rather liberal sense in which it appears on the inventories. Castle Precincts was a non-parochial area adjacent to St. Peter's church and many of its inhabitants were likely to describe themselves as being of St. Peter's parish. St. Mark's on College Green, originally the chapel of the Gaunt's Hospital, was acquired by the Corporation in 1542 and granted to the French Protestant refugees who worshipped there until 1722. The term 'Barton Regis' was frequently used for that part of the parish of St. Philip and St. Jacob which lay outside the city boundary, but it would be unrealistic to assume that 'SS. Philip & Jacob' always referred to the in-parish and 'Barton Regis' to the out-parish. Inventories are included from the parishes of Bedminster and St. George, Easton-in-Gordano, but these were never part of the city and deanery of Bristol.

All the earlier city inventories bear the name of the parish, but increasingly after 1660, and especially after 1675, they frequently state just 'City of Bristol', while the rural ones continue to give their place of origin. The names of the parishes have been given their modern form, but in one or two places (i.e. Broad Street and Wine Street) only the street named can be given, as it is impossible to know in which of two neighbouring parishes the deceased lived.

SS. Philip & Jacob	Easton-in-Gordano
St. Stephen	Stapleton
St. Thomas	Stoke Gifford
St. Werburgh	Westbury-on-Trym
Temple	Winterbourne

The areas asterisked are not ecclesiastical parishes.

In the inventories from the rural areas the part of the parish is often given. This applies particularly to a large parish such as Westbury-on-Trym with its three tithings of Westbury-on-Trym, Redland and Shirehampton. Shirehampton, being near the mouth of the River Avon, had a maritime interest and its inhabitants included a number of sailors, mariners and pilots. Westbury also had a number of isolated farms or 'island sites' out on the Severn Marsh, an area normally associated with Henbury. Such apparent anomalies as 'Henbury (Lawrence Weston)' and 'Westbury-on-Trym (Lawrence Weston)' are both technically correct. A similar situation arises with the smaller parish of Compton Greenfield which lies within the tithing of Compton in the parish of Henbury. Such descriptions are indexed in the form in which they occur. On the other hand, Aust, with its ancient church near the end of the Severn Bridge, always remained a chapelry of Henbury and all references to it are included in that parish. The two rural parishes of Alveston and Olveston are so similar in name that they are easily confused when reading the handwriting.

With the rural parishes the name given in brackets may be quite specific and refer to individual farms which still exist or can be traced today. Cattybrook, Elinors, The Worthy, Woodlands and Ingst are examples. It would be interesting to study their fortunes over the years as several inventories exist for each property.

Column 4. Occupations

The occupation or status, marital or otherwise, given in this column is taken when possible from the opening words of the inventory. Otherwise it was obtained from the will; or, failing that, from the contents of the inventory if the trade goods are sufficiently distinctive. Angular brackets have been used if the occupation is not expressly stated on the inventory. In any case, the declared occupation of the deceased may not always agree with the goods listed by the appraisers. David Potter (1720/26) is described as a surgeon, but his inventory is that of a man keeping a thriving inn of 23 rooms, while John Bittfield (1624/12), a soap-maker of St. Thomas, has an inventory filled with a miscellany of items from his general store. Such secondary occupations must remain outside the scope of this index; although with David Potter a note is included, as his inventory is such a good example of an important city inn.

The inventories from the country parishes cover a limited number of occupations and crafts such as yeoman, husbandman, blacksmith or labourer, and these can yield valuable information on the agricultural economy of the district. It is, however, from the occupations of those dwelling in the city that a picture of a more complex style of life emerges. The comprehensive list is impressive, and although several of the trade descriptions overlap or are synonymous, there are over 240 distinct occupations mentioned. These are given in the Occupation Index which allows the inventories to be traced in the main index.

One cannot work with these inventories for long without realizing how closely parish and occupation are linked. It is well known that weaving centred on Temple (the Weaver's Guild Chapel was in Temple Church); butchers operated from the Shambles in St. Mary-le-Port, and St. Thomas was alive with the arrival and departure of coaches from its several inns. What is less evident until the relationship between parish and occupation is studied in detail is how far these trades spilled over into neighbouring areas, and to what extent related trades went hand in hand. The inventories show that the butchery trade was not limited to St. Mary-le-Port or the adjacent parish of St. Nicholas but was also thriving in SS. Philip & Jacob on the city boundary where the animals arrived 'on the hoof' and were found suitable grazing until they were needed. Most hauliers came from St. John where many of the merchants lived; while the five

There are inventories of 33 coal-miners, coal-drivers and colliers from the Barton Regis, Stapleton and Mangotsfield districts.

Many of the surgeons were ships' surgeons, and many of the coopers and shipwrights worked on board sea-going vessels.

carriers whose inventories we have are from SS. Philip & Jacob or Barton Regis near the Old Market.

Ship-building and its allied trades – shipwrights, ship-carpenters, joiners, sail-makers, riggers, coopers, block-makers and pump-makers – congregated in St. Stephen's parish while another group of shipwrights lived in Abbots Leigh. Was it just coincidence that they liked to live on that side of the city, or was shipbuilding then in progress at Crockern Pill? There is also a shipwright's inventory from St. George, Easton-in-Gordano and a ship-carpenter from Abbots Leigh, so this seems a distinct possibility.

The rural nature of SS. Philip & Jacob during this period is shown by the number of husbandmen and gardeners living there, by the charcoal burner, and the forest ranger. The development of Barton

Regis can also be followed; and the rise of a brick-making industry there is shown by inventories dated 1717, 1736 and 1737.

Redcliffe was favoured by chapmen. Perhaps they liked to live near the inns and hostleries of St. Thomas where travelling merchants came to display their wares. It was also the centre for the woollen industry and its trades included felt-hat making and hair-weaving. Drapers' inventories come chiefly from St. Stephen and St. Nicholas which suggests that much of their livelihood came from supplying ships and their personnel. St. James' parish included many of the trades related to building, such as house-carpenters, masons, rough-masons and pavers.

A full examination of the occupations carried out in each parish cannot be made without taking into account the information given in the wills and this goes beyond the scope of this Guide. We have prepared such lists hoping that they will give a reliable insight into the life of the various parts of the city throughout this period.

The other type of information given in this column deals with the status, marital or otherwise, of the individual concerned. It ranges from lieutenant-colonel, captain, doctor of laws to pensioner, almsman, pauper and prisoner in Newgate. The goods of a married woman were regarded as those of her husband, so it is surprising to find the term 'wife' used at all. When it does occur it is usually because there is some uncertainty as to whether her husband is still alive. Among the unmarried citizens' inventories there is an imbalance of 134 spinsters to 14 bachelors.

In the occupations and status index those widows with an inventory valued at over £100 have been specifically included because of the part many of them played in the economy of the city by loaning money on bond or by using it for adventures at sea. The less wealthy widows, together with yeomen, husbandmen and mariners, are so numerous that it is impracticable to index each entry separately.

Column 5. Values

The values given in this column have been rounded to the nearest pound and look straightforward, but there is an inherent danger that they may be misunderstood and interpreted too literally. They are 'inventory values' taken for a specific purpose. They are not a direct measure of the person's wealth, but only an evaluation of his moveable goods and chattels (including any chattel leases) and the value of any cultivated crops. They do not include the value of any freehold property he might own, any income he may have or the goodwill of his business. Neither are the goods appraised at their full value, but only at the second-hand value they would be expected to fetch if the executors were forced to sell them to clear the deceased's debts and to pay his legacies. Iron, brass, pewter, silver and gold are valued at a standard rate per pound or ounce regardless of the workmanship of the article involved. In addition, there may sometimes have been a conscious effort on the part of the appraisers to put low values on the goods to keep the fees of the probate court at a minimum. Furthermore, because people from all walks of life were called upon to appraise inventories there are bound to be inconsistencies and inaccuracies in the results, but these do not detract from the overall interest and usefulness of the figures.

Many inhabitants could, if they wished, afford to pay educated people to prepare inventories for them, or perhaps find someone among their friends or from their craft guild able to undertake this task. The distinctive writing of Samuel Fox can be recognized in several inventories of the 1680 period (e.g. Walter Howell 1680/30), and Mary Smith, a widow who ran a writing school in Church Lane, St. Thomas, wrote several mariners inventories between 1730 and 1735, of which that of Mordecai Oman 1735/31 is the last. Poorer people would press into service any neighbour who could write at all. There are inventories in which both appraisers were illiterate and who approved the document by making their mark. Under these conditions all kinds of inaccuracies could arise. The calculations may be wrong, the addition incorrect, and in at least one case the funeral expenses were included in the assets of the deceased (David Vowell, 1640/80). Such erroneous inventories were admitted for probate, and remained unchecked unless challenged. Consequently we found it necessary to check the totals of all the inventories, and to correct approximately one in five for amounts ranging from a few pence to a hundred pounds. This was in the inventory of Edward Tolson (1643/89) which has an appraisers' total of £371–14–10 instead of £271–14–10. The chief causes of error by the appraisers were found to be (1) failure to arrange their figures in distinct columns, (2) a tendency to total 10/- as an additional £1, (3) the misreading of altered or blotted figures when making the addition, and (4) the ease with which some roman numerals can be misread.

The period of these inventories covers that of the introduction of arabic numerals. Around 1610 they occur in about 10% of the inventories, but by 1650 the proportion had risen to 90%, the change being most marked after 1642. At the height of the change-over awkward hybrid values appear, such as xs 8d, £i-vj-8 and £x-0-4.

There is also the question of debts which may be due to the deceased. Sometimes these are put under two headings 'sperate' and 'desperate', but frequently they are put together as 'debts good and bad'. Consequently, to be consistent, all debts have had to be included in these values. Even if they were never recovered, such debts serve to illustrate the extent of the deceased's trading interests. Thus, in the case of John Young (1658/3) the inventory total was £2,960–18–5, and his desperate debts £2,240–19–0. The appraisers' errors and the inclusion of bad debts explains why the total value shown in this Guide often differs from that given on the inventory. Nevertheless, the inventory values give an important insight into the social status and lifestyle of each individual. The scavenger John Barwick (1687/4) with an inventory value of £125 was better-off than one would expect, while Henry Martin (1683/38) and Thomas Deane (1745/6), both described as 'Gent.', had values of £2 and £3 respectively. The values also serve to distinguish between different inventories bearing the same name, and can point to how successfully a widow carried on the business of her late husband, or show the fortunes of a farm as it passed from father to son.

The inventory values cannot be used to provide statistically valid evidence of the distribution of wealth in the area, as many important inventories were proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury and do not appear in this collection; but they do afford a valuable indication of its distribution between the various trades.

Column 6. Notes

The final column of the index has been added to allow brief comments to be included where necessary. Among other things it permits reference to duplicate copies of inventories and to alternative names. It also serves to draw attention to the more comprehensive accounts of executors' expenditure. Many inventories have some reference to funeral and other expenses, but only the more informative of them are marked 'inv. & account'.

Most of the eighteenth century mariners whose names appear in the index lost their lives at sea either through sickness or wounds while on active service or through privateering activities. Their inventories consist of a formal statement of the wages due for their last voyage and may include the name of the ship and its master. There are 1486 inventories of this type during the period 1704–1764, more than half the total number. The first is typical:

Benjamin Tarr, cooper, July 1704

"Deceased's wages due on the ship Expectation of Bristol

With these inventories, if the occupation is given as something other than mariner or sailor the entry is marked 'died at sea' to show it is one of this type. The occupations concerned are usually those needed on board ship: shipwrights, sailmakers, carpenters, coopers and surgeons; but there are others, for example, yeoman, cabinet-maker and stone-carver.

On the few occasions when more extensive information is needed, it has been given a full line of text and needs no further comment.

NOTES ON ABBREVIATIONS AND LAY-OUT

(for full details of method used, see Introduction)

In addition to the extended notes, round brackets enclose information written on the inventory.

Angular brackets enclose information taken from the will or derived from the inventory contents.

Year reference Column

This gives the year of the bundle in which the inventory is to be found and its position in that bundle.

Upper case letters mark an introduction into the numbered sequence, 'A' being the document preceeding the insertion.

Lower case letters differentiate documents relating to the same individual.

'CP' distinguishes inventories included with the Ecclesiastical Cause Papers.

W as a prefix indicates that the corresponding will exists.

(w) indicates a related, or possibly relevant, will.

Names

The spelling used by the appraiser is normally indexed unaltered.

Value

to make these comparable all values include good and bad debts and have been corrected for errors made by the appraisers in their addition. Inventory values are of moveable goods only and may not represent total wealth.

In the note on page 85 'BRS XXVI' refers to the Bristol Record Society's publication Minute Book of the Men's Meeting of the Society of Friends in Bristol 1667-1686.

APPENDIX II

Mariners' Inventories after 1704

MARINERS' INVENTORIES AFTER 1704

After 1704 more than half the Bristol probate inventories are those of mariners, surgeons, coopers, hoopers, carpenters, sailmakers and others who died while serving at sea. These form a distinct category of inventories. They do not list personal possessions or household goods but record only the wages due to the deceased for his last voyage, and usually the name and type of ship and the name of the master or captain. In the following table the number of such inventories is given for each year. The tabulation shows when the impact of the war at sea was at its greatest; the rate at which the usual local inventories continued to be produced and how they began to decline about 1760. There is a total of 1486 mariners 'Wages due . . .' inventories during this period.

Columns: (1) Total inventories
 (2) City and rural inventories
 (3) Mariners' 'Wages due' inventories
 (4) Mariners' inventories as percentage of total
